General information

- The module ALDE 122 is offered by personnel of the subject group Academic Literacy housed in the School of Languages. Details for online contact are published on your eFundi site for ALDE 122.
- All students registered for ALDE 122 have access to a specific eFundi page. On this page, students have access to the following:

- announcements providing general information and instructions for classes, assignments and tests;
- eFundi-lessons and other online content, that will link to the various assessments and assignments; and
- a gradebook of marks for assessments submitted on eFundi.
- You can contact your ALDE 122 lecturer via email. Your lecturer will make available information regarding consultation times on the ALDE122 eFundi site – these will correlate with the times as indicated on the timetable for the ALDE 122 group into which you have been divided.
- Marks for tests written on eFundi will be released immediately after completion. This mark is final. The tests will not be available after the deadlines; therefore, NO extensions will be granted. If you experience problems in completing the tests, you must contact your lecturer by email before the deadline set for the test. A stable internet connection is necessary for completing the tests.
- All queries regarding marks and class work are handled by your lecturer (not the administrative personnel or any other lecturer). Please approach your lecturer as problems arise. If you communicate problems to your lecturer only at the end of the semester it will be too late to solve them.
- For queries and/or complaints of a more general or personal nature related to ALDE 122, it is very important that you adhere to the following line of reporting: 1) lecturer → 2) campus subject leader. The university is a professional environment where certain protocols and rules of communication and engagement are put in place. Failure to comply with the indicated line of reporting will result in a delay in solving your problem.
- It is your responsibility to take note of information regarding teaching matters and the completion of assessments as communicated by your lecturer or by the eFundi site administrators. The primary mode of communication is your eFundi site for ALDE 122.
- Medical certificates (or other valid documentation) for missed assessments and classes must be submitted via email within 5 working days. Failure to comply with this will result in you receiving a zero for the missed assessment(s).
- Deadlines for class activities may vary between different groups. Makes sure to attend every class to stay informed.

Deadlines for finalising module marks will be communicated on your specific ALDE 122 eFundi page. Remember to check your marks on your eFundi Gradebook and contact your lecturer with any enquiries.
